The automotive industry has been reducing their reliance on procurement from offshore locations.

Automotive organizations are also boosting inventories, as a short-term resilience strategy.

Sustainability efforts have taken a backseat for organizations amid supply chain crises.

Current data-driven supply chain initiatives lack maturity and investment.

How can the automotive supply chain become a source of competitive advantage?